

Carmen

Hello, beautiful soul!

IT'S SO NICE TO "MEET" YOU!

My name is Carmen, and I'm so grateful you've taken a moment to get to know me and my family here in the foothills of Northern California. I can only imagine the many emotions you may be carrying right now, and I deeply honor the courage it takes to consider adoption. Whatever decision you make, I truly hope it brings peace to your heart.

Our family is rooted in togetherness, compassion, communication, and trust. Our home is a safe haven, a place to gather, build memories, and care for one another deeply.

I would be honored to welcome your child into a home where their story would always be respected, celebrated, and lovingly woven into ours. Thank you so much for taking the

my story

Ever since I was little, I played the mama bunny role.

As I grew up, my nieces and nephews became some of the most important people in my life. They came to me to play, ask for advice, or simply be held after getting scolded for being a little naughty. I always tried to comfort them while gently helping them understand why their parents may have been upset.

We watched movies with popcorn, painted, rode bikes, learned to dance, swam, and explored the incredible museums of Mexico City, where I grew up. Those years shaped me deeply and showed me how meaningful it is to nurture a child's emotional wellbeing, curiosity, confidence, and sense of security.

Caring for children has felt like part of who I am for as long as I can remember.

why adoption?

My journey to motherhood has looked different from what I once imagined, yet I believe the Divine has a purpose for each of us. I embrace this path with deep gratitude and respect for everyone it touches.

More than anything, becoming a mother is the dream I have held onto longest and loved most. I am ready to welcome a child with love, stability, intention, and an open heart.

all about me

I am a woman who leads with her heart and finds beauty in nature, music, art, new places, and the people I love. My journey to motherhood has also given me the gift of time, time to build an authentic life I am proud of. I immigrated to the United States, built two successful businesses, and became financially independent.

As a financial consultant and money coach, I have the flexibility to be a present and involved parent for both the big milestones and the quiet everyday moments. I have also spent years studying psychology and emotional growth because I believe raising a confident, emotionally healthy child begins with being a self-aware parent.

My friends would describe me as warm and nurturing, the person who remembers your birthday, checks in when life gets hard, and always has a home-cooked meal ready when you need it most. I love deeply and show up fully for the people in my life – and I know I will bring that same love and devotion into motherhood.

Loved you then, love you still,
ALWAYS HAVE, always will.

The heart of our home has always been creating a space where people feel cared for, comfortable, and deeply loved.

home sweet home

Our home is a warm, cozy three-bedroom single-family house nestled in one of Rocklin's most loving and welcoming neighborhoods. One of those three bedrooms is waiting. I have been dreaming about it — imagining the colors on the walls, the soft light of a nightlight glowing in the corner, the sound of a lullaby filling the air. When the time comes, that room will be designed with nothing but love, a space where a child feels completely safe, completely seen, and completely at home from their very first night.

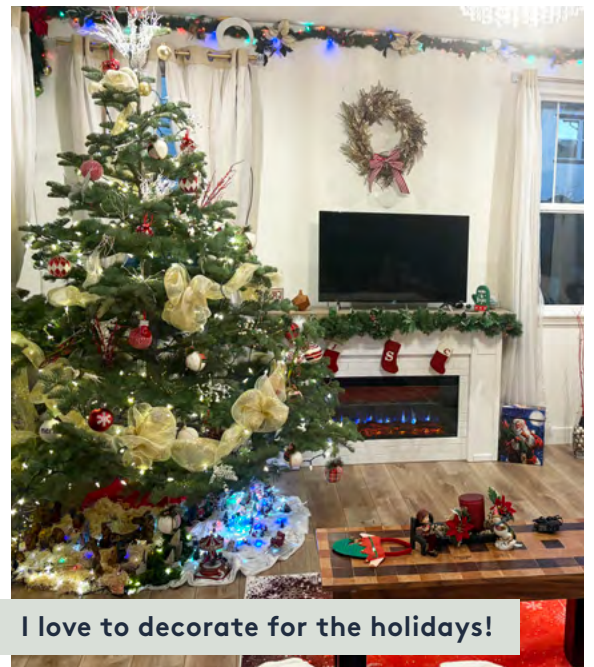

my pup

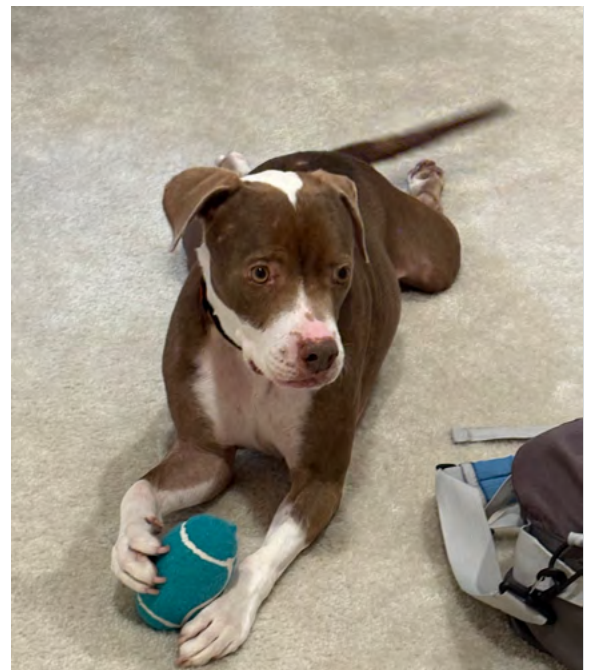

I believe our pets find us. Sammy came into my life after my brother discovered him wandering the streets of Mexico — and he has been a gentle, loving soul ever since. He adores people and is especially sweet with young children. I have a feeling your child and Sammy will make a wonderful pair.

I especially treasure the furniture my dad and I built together, including our dining table and bookcase, each made with his skilled carpenter's hands. I can already picture him helping build a crib or a little rocking horse and one day teaching a child the quiet art of working with wood.

I love to decorate for the holidays!

my favorite things

Visiting museums & theaters • Hiking and biking • Reading by the river, at the beach, or in my backyard • Having meaningful conversations with people from different backgrounds • Taking family road trips with a fun playlist

Decorating and creating warm, meaningful spaces at home • Baking tamales and holiday cookies during the holidays • Watching California sunsets with gratitude in my heart • Exploring new places and embracing life

my community

We are nestled in a nature-rich community in Northern California, and adventure is never far from our doorstep. Every morning begins with a walk along the creek with Sammy, my sweet furry companion, where birds, squirrels, and wild turkeys share their space with neighboring families and us with their little ones. I already picture a curious child toddling alongside us, discovering that wild turkey for the very first time.

Our neighborhood is full of young families and it is safe for children to play outside — the kind of street where kids still ride bikes and neighbors know each other's names.

extended family

A loving extended family is already waiting for your child.

I was born and raised in Mexico City by two elementary school teachers — and yes, Grandma and Grandpa are exactly as wonderful as that sounds. They sing, they play, they create spaces where children feel completely free to express themselves. They will be a constant, loving presence in our home, and there will always be plenty of arms to carry your child and endless lullabies to fill the house.

I have two brothers, each with a daughter of their own. We are a close family — the kind that shows up for each other, gathers for every holiday and birthday, and never lets too much time pass without being together. Your child will grow up knowing their cousins, running around at family gatherings, and feeling the warmth of a big, connected family even as an only child at home.

Beyond family, I have built a beautiful community of friends here in Northern California — many of them parents themselves — who already feel like family. This child will be surrounded not just by love, but by a whole village of people rooting for them from day one.

my thoughts on parenting

When I think about raising a child, one thing is clear to me — the greatest gift I can offer is the space to become fully themselves.

I believe in meeting a child exactly where they are, leaving my own expectations at the door and staying curious about who they truly are. Every child arrives in this world with their own gifts, their own personality, their own way of seeing things — and I consider it a privilege, not a challenge, to discover and nurture those gifts rather than shape them into something predetermined.

When it comes to education, I will follow their lead — feeding whatever sparks curiosity, whether that is science, art, music, or building things with Grandpa in the workshop. I want to raise a child who loves learning because learning feels like an adventure, not an obligation.

Just a few of the many wonderful kids in my life!

The bond that links your true family is not one of blood,
but of respect and joy in each other's life.
